Author-Actor Here

Wm. E. Forrest, author-actor, is in Carmel for a month or more, finding it necessary to be here to complete a story for Lew Cody, entitled "What Would You Do?"

Mr. Forrest believes that original ideas, not adaptations of the works of ancient authors, will be in demand again. Frequently, after reading a novel, when it is shown on the screen, the public is disappointed. The padding, often necessary, spoils the story, thus making a draggy, uninteresting screen picture.

Mr. Forrest was seen here recently as Lord Banstead in "Vivette," featuring Vivian Martin.

Pine Needles

The Soledad Bee has inaugurated a campaign having for its object the construction of a good road from Soledad to The Pinnacles, one of the most interesting natural wonders on the American continent.

An automobile you will be proud to own—the Briscoe C. O. Gould, Carmel Garage, local dealer.

Mrs. E. Hopkins of Ross Valley, with her children, and Miss Mary Show of the Children's Hospital, San Francisco, are spending a couple of weeks here with their father, Professor A. B. Show. They have the Rogers cottage.

T. S. Miller has been joined here by his wife, and they have as guest this week Dr. G. H. Richardson of San Francisco, prominent Red Cross worker.

There will be no regular freight and passenger stage line between Carmel and Monterey and San Francisco. The Railroad Commission has turned down the application of the promoters on the ground that public convenience did not require the service at present.

Mr. and Mr. J. A. Webster and Miss Nancy are here from Fresno for a week or two. No flu in Carmel.

Hoover Electric Cleaners. See them demonstrated at Holman's, Pac. Grove.

Our county judge, Joseph H. Bardin, recently occupied the court of Judge G. F. Gosbey of Santa Clara county. The San Jose Mercury gave him a nice little write-up.

Call on L. S. Slevin for Notary work.

Plans for the construction of an aviation field at Pebble Beach, near the Forest Lodge, will, it is said, be executed shortly. The space already surveyed for the purpose measures 1050 by 1400 feet, and will be used also for polo and other sports.

Mrs. Charles Clark has returned from Texas. Miss Margaret is in Los Angeles. We're glad they are home.

Registration for Carmel City Election closes March 12.

The Masquerade

With keen anticipation Carmel residents have for years looked forward to the annual masque ball of the Manzanita Club. For over ten years this affair has been the big social event of the town, and last Saturday night realized a splendid recurrence of former good times.

There were many striking and unique costumes, and the ages of the participants varied from eight to eighty (nearly).

A pleasing feature of the evening was the Clown Dance, under the direction of Miss Grace Wickham, who was assisted by Irene Gould, Hilda and Helen Hilliard, and Elizabeth and Maryau Hopper.

Prizes were awarded—and deservedly—to Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Leidig, Organ-grinder and Monkey, best sustained double-character; to Miss Mai Guichard, Topsy, best sustained character; to Miss Katherine Comstock, Egyptian Girl, best lady's costume, and to Ernest Schwepinger, Chinese Mandarin, best gentleman's costume.

Never was Manzanita Hall so prettily and so fully decorated, and Ben Leidig's music was good and snappy. Here's to the committee in charge.

Boosts and Knocks

By Observer

George Washington couldn't tell a lie, so 'tis said. Well, I've got the best of George. I can, but I won't.

Wood or Woodrow. Either one or both of them would be satisfactory Presidential candidates to Fred Leidig and Phil Wilson.

Joe-Jefferson Hand is looking for actors. He wants to put on "A Night Off," but he needs people to play the parts. All dressed up and no place to go. Won't you help him out?

The Gilletts certainly are winners. A while ago the head of the family won a piano at Leidig's, and the other night one of the heavenly twins won a box of candy at the movies. Next!

I had lunch at Curtis' a day or two ago. A young man came in and ordered a tamale. When he had dispatched it he called for a finger-bowl. Did Delos give it to him? Emphatically I'll say it—he did—not.

I was a passenger on an auto driving along Eight Avenue about a week ago. When we turned into the San Carlos Highway, Wow! what a jolt. Thank goodness, that corner has now been levelled up.

Two Swedish ladies went into the Pine Cone office yesterday to learn the procedure necessary to secure passports. The editor enlightened them, and then asked, "Where are you going?" The reply was, "We bane gone to Oakland."

About dusk a few evenings ago a couple of men were observed laboriously rolling a barrel along one of our side streets. A Sherlock Holmes shadowed them. When the barrel was placed in a barn, the sleuth investigated. It contained roof paint—not booze. Stung, Oscar.

A number of our citizens, men and women, are being groomed to make the race for City Trustee in April. I know who some of them are, but I won't tell. I might upset the political apple cart. And I have also heard that there will be more than one candidate for City Clerk.

SAVED FROM HAREM

Armenian Girls Rescued from Turks Being Taken to Near East Relief Home.

The three pretty Armenian girls in the auto are taking a real "joy ride," joyful having another meaning from that generally associated with auto riding here. They have been rescued from the harem of a Turk after four years of shameful servitude and are being taken to one of the Near East Relief rescue homes. No wonder they are smiling for the first time since their captivity. The Near East Relief is caring for many thousands of these girls until they can find their relatives. Also it is working to save 250,000 orphans and over a million adults from starvation this winter. That is why it is making a nation wide appeal for funds to carry on its noble work.

The new proprietors have already brought their families here, and their children will attend the local public school.

For the present the clerks employed under the Leidig regime will retain their position. Mr. Leidig has as yet not decided what he will do, having under consideration several attractive business offers.

Condemning the law that limits the number of abalones that may be taken at one time, N. B. Scofield of the California Fish and Game Commission says:

"There are a few abalone cranks in California, who, when they cannot find the univalves along the shore, where they are naturally scarce, say they are becoming extinct.

"We have a multiplicity of laws to protect abalones, but only one fixing a size minimum at which they may be caught—a 7-inch diameter for red and a 6½-inch for green—is necessary. The public, taking them from the shallows, offends against the size law.

"Pismo is not fished out. It is a sand beach, and abalones were never there, as they are found only where the coast is rocky. While the public may have stripped the shore-line rocks at Carmel and Monterey, in deep water at these places the supply is plentiful.

Scofield says further, concerning the limit law:

"Such law is criminal. It does not conserve the supply; it hoards a large food reserve. With the size limit strictly observed there would be no danger of exterminating the supply."

How and Where George Washington Lived

Irving's Description of Washington's Home Brings Famous Spot Vividly Before Reader.

MOUNT VERNON was beautifully situated on a swelling height, crowned with wood, and commanding a magnificent view up and down the Potomac. The grounds immediately about it were laid out somewhat in the English taste. The estate was apportioned into separate farms, devoted to different kinds of culture, each having its allotted laborers; much, however, was still covered with wild woods, seamed with deep dells and runs of water, and indented with inlets—haunts of deer and lurking places of foxes. . . .

"No estate in United America," observed Washington in one of his letters, "is more pleasantly situated—in a high and healthy country; in a latitude between the extremes of heat and cold; on one of the finest rivers in the world, a river well stocked with various kinds of fish at all seasons of the year." . . .

These were as yet the aristocratical days of Virginia. The estates were large, and continued in the same families by entail. Many of the wealthy planters were connected with old families in England. The young men, especially the elder sons, were often sent to finish their education there, and on their return brought out the tastes and habits of the mother country. The governors of Virginia were from the higher ranks of society, and maintained a corresponding state. The "established" or Episcopal church predominated throughout the "ancient dominion," as it was termed. . . .

Lived in Opulent Splendor.

A style of living prevailed among the opulent Virginia families in those days that has faded away. The houses were spacious, commodious, liberal in all their appointments, and fitted to cope with the free-handed, open-hearted hospitality of the owners. Nothing was more common than to see handsome services of plate, elegant equipages, and superb carriage horses—all imported from England.

The Virginia planters were prone to leave the care of their estates too much to their overseers, and to think personal labor a degradation. Washington carried into his rural affairs the same method, activity, and circumspection that had distinguished him in military life. He kept his own accounts, posted up his books, and balanced them with mercantile exactness. We have examined them, as well as his diaries recording his daily occupations, and his letter-books, containing entries of shipments . . . and correspondence with his London agents. They are monuments of his business habits. The products of his estate also became so noted for the faithfulness, as to quantity and quality, with which they were put up, that it is said any barrel of flour that bore the brand of George Washington, Mount Vernon, was exempted from the customary inspection in the West India ports. He rose early, often before daybreak in the winter when the nights were long. On such occasions he lighted his own fire, and wrote or read by candlelight. He breakfasted at seven in summer, at eight in winter. . . . Immediately after breakfast he mounted his horse, and visited those parts of the estate where any work was going on, seeing to everything with his own eyes, and often with his own hand.

Relaxation in Gayeties.

Occasionally he and Mrs. Washington would pay a visit to Annapolis, at that time the seat of government of Maryland, and partake of the gayeties which prevailed during the session of the legislature. The society of these seats of provincial governments was polite and fashionable, and more exclusive than in these republican days, being, in a manner, the outposts of the British aristocracy, where all places of dignity and profit were secured for younger sons and poor but proud relatives. During the session of the legislature dinners and balls abounded, and there were occasional attempts at theatricals. The latter was an amusement for which Washington always had a relish, though he never had an opportunity to gratify it effectually. Neither was he disinclined to mingle in the dance; and we remember to have heard venerable ladies, who had been belles in his day, pride themselves on having had him for a partner, though, they added he was apt to be a ceremonious and grave one.

In this round of rural occupation, rural amusement, and social intercourse, Washington passed several tranquil years. His already established reputation drew many visitors to Mount Vernon; some of his early companions in arms were his occasional guests, and his friends and connections linked him with some of the most prominent and worthy people of the country, who were sure to be received with cordial but simple and unpretending hospitality. . . . He was active by nature, and eminently a man of business by habit. As judge of the County court, and member of the house of burgesses, he had numerous calls upon his time and thoughts, and was often drawn from home; for whatever trust he undertook he was sure to fulfill with scrupulous exactness.—Washington Irving.
